ROBBERY of the NORTH MAIL.

GENERAL POST-OFFICE,

Edinburgh, August 8. 1787.

THE Rider of the NORTH MAIL, which was dispatched from this Office on the 5th instant, was attacked on the asternoon of the day following at the park-dykes of Pannure, about half way between Dandee and Arbroath, by two Men who came out of a field of corn, one of whom took hold of the horse, and presented a pistol to the rider, whilst the other carried off the Mail. Upon making search for the Mail, it was soon sound, about haif a mile westward from the place where the Robbery was committed, and fortunately the whole contents entire.

Both the Men wore their own hair; were of a black complexion. The Man who took hold of the horse had on a striped dusse coat of a whitish colour; and the other, who carried off the Mail, had on a brownish coat much patched.

At this period, when the commotions in Holland engage the attention of Europe, we think our readers will not be displeased with a brief retrofpect of the conduct of that nation to their Stadt. holder's family, fince their emancipation from the holder's family, lince their emancipation from the Spanish yoke, down to the re-establishment of William III. in the dignity of his ancestors:

THE struggles made by the inhabitants of the Seven United Provinces, to release themselves from the Spanish yoke, had reduced them to the lowest ebb of distress. Without friends, without allies, without resources, they supplicated the Court of England in the most humble terms for succourt. Queen Elizibeth, who had much to apprehend from the Court of Spain, as well as the States, appeared to be that potentate whose interest coincided with their own. To her the States offered the government of the United Provinces, and, notwithflanding her refusal to take it upon her, they for some time pressed her acceptance of it in the most carnest manner. Not willing to acquiesce in their request, not totally to abandon them, the supplied them with some troops, which were sent to the Low Countries under the command of Dudley, Earl of Leicester, It took up some time before the Dutch were enabled to retrieve themselves, which they did at last, at the expense of the blood and treasure of England. However, during her connection with the Dutch, this discerning benefactress saw that they were a people in whom no considence could be placed; wherefore, after expending two millions sterling in supporting them, for her own security, and in order to bridle them, she slipulated, that two such Englishmen as she nominated, should fit and vote in their States; and that the towns of Brill, Ramekin, and Flushing, the keys of the Meese and the Scheldt, should be in her possessing the Meese and the Scheldt, should be in her possessing the Republic were privately managed, whereby the Prince of Orange, whose family had lost so many lives in defence of the freedom of their country, as well as the English resident Members of the State, were in effect excluded from any share in the administration of the country.

Queen Elizabeth, incented at this ingratitude of Queen Elizabeth, incented at this Ingratitude of a people to their first magistrate, who risqued every thing for their liberties, and to her who was at such an expence to preserve them when in the most imminent danger, called them to account for what she had expended in their behalf. The Dutch pleaded poverty and inability of payment in the most pitiful terms, and befought the Queen, "That as she excelled all others in power and glory, so she would continue her mercy and pity to their distressed btates."

The Queen answered, "That she had been often deluded by their deceitful supplications, and singrateful actions, as well as their pretences of poverty; that they bore no reverence to superiors, not took any care but for themselves."

This faction, that thus fet itself up in opposition to the Grange family, was headed by Barnvelle, and was called at the answer of the Queen, in order to appeale her, offered, in the year 1508, to pay her the whole debt after the war, and during the continuance of hostilities to pay her 100,000 l. per annum; and that the English garrifons in Brill, Rumekin, and I lushing should be paid by the States.

The Queen, not out of any confidence in the Dutch, but wisely considering if the resulted their offers, the States might sue for the protection of France, then at peace with the Spaniards 7 or, that they might make a peace with Spaniards 7 or, that they might make a peace with Spaniards 7 or, that they might be the whole debt; accepted their terms. But this engagement remains unperformed to this day, except the payment of the English troops in the cautionary towns 1 and even this, as soon as their interest suggested it to them, was performed but by halves.

Matters remained in this condition till the reign of sames I, when the Dutch nearly got rid of the English without paying the debt contracted for establishing their independence. In the year 1600, they made a trace with Spain for cleven years. A Barnvelt availed himself of this to revive his views of getting rid of the Orange family, and the English He united with Grotius, a leade of the Armanian

Barnett availed himfelf of this to revive his views of getting rid of the Orange family, and the English. He united with Grotius, a leader of the Armonian party. Thefe two effected the exclusion of the English influence; but Barnvelt, so far from being successful against the Prince of Orange, lost his head, and Grotius, to avoid the same fate, sted his counter.

Although Barnvelt holt his head, the faction did not die with him. For as foon as the Dutch made peace with Spain in 1648, by the treaty of Monfler, and the then Prince of Orange, grandfather of King William III. one of the greatest penerals of the times, had died, the year after the treaty the cabals of the Lovettein faction broke out affect, and attacked his fon, a Prince of an active, include spirits. about twenty-rwo years of age; they began by at tempting to diffund the English troops that conti nued in their fervice.

The Prince forefeeing if he forfered this, that his authority must next be kruck at, referred to he before hand with the configurors, who were all miled at Amsterdam; after marching in filmee within three hours march of that town, the Humburgh por paffed by the Prince undiscovered, in a fog. and apatied by the Prince undifcovered, in a rog, and alarmed the Burgher's at the near approach of the Prince. Upon this they overflowed the country, by opening their fluices, which floor the Prince's progress, and, shortly after this disappointment he lost his life in the small-pox. He died upon the 24th of October 1650, leaving the Princess big with child of the Prince who afterwards became King William, (To be continued.)

FROM THE LIGHDON PAPERS, Aug. 8. Paris, July 25. Another remonstrance has been printed by Parliament, from which it is very easy to perceive that they will confent to any thing but granting a new fubfidy, without having a par-ticular account laid before them of the deficiencies in the treasury, and actual situation of the sinances. To double the poll-tax, and re-establish the third-twentieth will be proposed by Ministry, but very probably will not be readily adopted by Parliament, There was a time when a French Monarch would have speedily terminated such an opposition to his sovereign will, by calling a Bed of Justice; but things are now much changed; and the King, af-ter having confulted his Notables, liftens very patiently to the respectful, but strong and sensible re-presentations of his Parliament. Indeed it looks as prefentations of his Parliament. Indeed it looks as if Louis XVI. who has already fignalized himself by supporting the cause of freedom in other countries is not difinclined to dispence a degree of that invaluable bleffing to his own.

Rotterdam, Aug. 2. There are two focieties here, one of the Modern Patriots, and the other of Stadtholderians. The former last week addressed that the themselves to the magistrates, and requested that the latter should be dissolved and abolished. The magifirates, having deliberated thereon; resolved to re-ject their requisition, and to protect the Stadthol-derian party, declaring, that whoever did the leaft injury to the faid fociety, or any one of its members, fhould be confidered and punished as a disturber of the public peace. They at the same time took under their protection the members of the Regency who were deposed by the citizens. The Patriots do not like this conduct; and as Mr Geven, the Grand Bailiff M. Elievier, the Burgomafter, two of the greatest patriots, and M. Baalde the Sheriff, were the strongest in opposing the demand of the parries citizens, they talk of deposing these three Regents. Our gates were for these reasons shut two or three days last week. The magnitrates, re-solving the gates should be shut no longer, fent two city messengers to cause them to be opened, but the citizens of the Council of War immediately fent another messenger to shut them, which was done; however the magistrates caused them to be opened the next day, and they have been open ever

The accounts of the Action near Utrecht, on the 26th July, are variously related in the foreign papers; but the following is the most circumstan-tial account, and seems at present to be the most Extratt of a letter from Utrocht, July 29, 1787 The army of the Prince of Orange, encamped a league from this town, having within thefe few days made a motion to the left, and having been reinforced by a strong detachment from the post of the village of Bunnick, they appeared to menace Vreef-wyck and Jutphaas; which are occupied by the troops of Holland, and thereby to cut off the communication, which is open by the Leek, with the Province of Holland.

" In order to prevent this being effected, the Rhingrave of Salm, who commands the garrison of this town, resolved to disturb them on the side of the village of Soeft; which forms the communication with part of the Stadtholderian corps, cantoned on the fide of Amersfoort. And accordingly, on the 26th, in the evening, he made a fortie from hence, with a ftrong detachment from the garrifon, in two columns, one of which he led in person towards Bunnick and Zeist, with an intention of making an attack, in order to prevent the execution of their defigns. This corps was composed of three hundred men, cavalry, and infantry, with two field pieces. They took post at Bilt, from whence the cavalry marched towards the advanced posts of the Stadtholder's troops: But these having retired to their main body, it became too dangerous, owing to the obscurity of the night, to pursue them. This detachment therefore returned at day-break, after

This small body left the camp at Zeist at about a league diffance on the right, and advanced to the village of Soeft. They secured two advanced posts of four men each; but the principal detachment they found at Soeftdyck, a caftle at fome diffance from Soeft, belonging to the regiment of Heffe Darnistadt, of the repartition of Friesland. "Those who were present at the action, think, that the regiment of Hesse Darmstadt made a very noble defence. The troops of Holland and Utrecht on their fide, also behaved with the greatest valour.

Thus deprived of our chief help, and the darkness of the night not permitting us to distinguish proper objects; likewife the impolfibility of forcing the enemy's posts with our finall number—all together made it necessary to retreat, and we were also under the necessary of trusting to a new guide. This guide proved treacherous; and led us towards the camp at Zeist. At day break re perceived our error; and returned back near Hilverfum, from whence different detachment came fuccessively hither.

The action lasted one hour and a half; when it commenced, the numbers were equal; but the enemy received a reinforcement from the neighbouring cantonments. The Viscount de Dolomien, formerly Lieutenant of the Body Guards of his Most Christian Majesty, acted as a volunteer in the Legi on of Salm, on this occasion.

LONDON, — Aug. 8.
Monday there was a Council held at the Mar quis of Carmarthen's office; the Lord Chancellory Pirt, Lord Sydney, and Lord Camden at tended; it was over about five o'clock, and difpatches were fent in confequence to the King at Windfor.

Same day the French Secretary waited on Mr Pitt, and had a long conference on account of the dispatches received on Saturday from Paris

Amongst the many good traits of his Royal Highness the Duke of York's education is, that he is very much mafter of his time; by which nothing is improperly anticipated or retarded. If the diffurbances in Holland continue, it is probable that the Parliament will meet before Christmas, to vote a fum of money to the Stadtholder. -It would certainly be more expedient to apply a million in this manner, than to be will and see a feries of measures pursued in the and inevitably productive of a war-that might cod 50 millions to this country.

Should a war on the part of the Stadtholder take place, we understand there are a number of young men of fathion intend applying for permission to ferve. His Majesty will, no doubte grant their requeft.

The dispatches received on Sunday at the Foreign Secretaries Office, St James's, which were fent over to Windfor, were from the Prince of Ocange to the King, and came over by the way of Oftend.

Lord Harvey, who is lately appointed his Ma-jefty's Minister to the Grand Duke of Tuscany, goes in the same frigate to Florence, which takes over General Haldimand to his government of Gibraltar.

Some letters were received in town on Monday from Oftend, which mention, that a magazine is forming in Zealand, wholly at the instance of the friends of the Stadtholder, where they are laying up grain and fodder, in large quantities, to supply the Stadtholderian army. This looks like ply the Stadtholderian army.

The present moment is big with the most impor-tant and interesting events. The Dutch have at length drawn the fword in earnest; the refolutions of our Court to that of Verfailles, it is generally believed, are spirited and decisive in favour of Stadtholder; the ultimatum of the French Cabinet to those resolutions is expected with impatience; and thould France in that ultimatum determine to support the States of Holland, the most fanguine advocates for peace must confess there is room for much solid apprehension, that all Europe will enivitably be involved in a general war.

A Dutch civil war will make a greater revolution in trade than any other war in Europe. A war befinish to the individuals of both of them, by captures but in a civil war, the very fource of trade is sentirely ftopped up, and the industry of the people in the Tower of all the Treaties at any time concluded between Great Britain and the States General of the United Provinces. Monday Mr Hollis, one of the King's Messen-

The Prussian Envoy at the Hague, so far from having, as has been represented, presented another Royal Highness the Princess of Orange, is at pre-Ten: builty occupied in the mediation proposed by the States of Holland; that Minister has frequent conferences with the Grand Penfionary, and other principal regents, and even with his Excellency the Marquis de Verac, Ambaffador from France .is effectively the greatest service that the Court of Berlin can render the Stadtholder, to difengage him from the measures in which he has so imprudently engaged. It is known that the King of France has highly approved of the answer of the States of Holland to the memorial of Mr De Thulemeyer: We are affured nevertheless, that the Envoy from Berlin has declared that his mafter was not fatisfied with this answer, and that he should in a short time prefent a fecond memorial. Three provinces and a half have taken measures with the Council of State relative to the States of Holland having threatened to interdict their territory among the Deputies of Amersfoort. Should they persist therein, they will exclude the true Deputies of the States of Utrecht.

In reasoning from past to present, events, the analogy often determines the truth of prophecy. -French court now affect to have countermandtheir former orders for a camp at Givet in Flanders. Thefe affurances are perfectly fimilar to those they made to Lord Stormont, Mr Forth, &c. at the beginning of the late-American war: although at the fame time, France was privately supporting the Americans with money and officers. Precifely the fame thing the is now doing, with respect to the disputes in Holland She furnishes the Dutch with money to pay their army, and she furnishes cers. In the Dutch accounts of the skirmish near Utrecht, there are two French officers killed. So early as when the American army belieged General Gage in Boston, there were French officers in the American camp: at the fame time, France was affuring us of her pacific disposition; and our King reported these assurances to both Houses of Parliament. The analogy is ob-These pretended affurances are only made to dupe us.

By a private letter from Vienna, dated July 16, we are informed that it was not then fettled whether the fixty thousand men destined for the Austrian Netherlands, were to march or not; but that five regiments were already arrived in the Belgic provinces, and ordered to halt there. The officers are now on full pay as in the time of was. This is a fact you may depend on. The appointment of the chief command is not yet fettled. The Flemings take very much to heart the recall of their Governors General. They have already removed from the Bank here eight millions of their capitals, which has had a finking effect on our funds. As firong report, but no otherwife, it may be mentioned, that the Prince of Kaunitz is about to refign his high office, which he has filled with fo much credit. The truth is, he has oppofers in the administration, who are for violent measures; he is for lenient ones and loves to gain popularity by humouring the Floring

The Commissioners lately appointed for inspecting the Crown lands, and making a report thereof to Government, have begun in Gloucestershire, where, during the months of May, June, and July, they have made a complete survey of the large forest of Dean, of which such a complete measurement has been taken, as to determine with great exactness, the full computation of the number of acres it contains. Whittlebury Forest is the next that comes under inspection; the New Forest in Hampshire, Sherwood Forest in Nottinghamshire, Windsor Forest in Nottin reft. &c. are to succeed. But an opinion has bees given, that it will be impossible to complete the befines in less than eighteen months from the commencement; so that the disposal of the Crown had according to a plan of the Cabinet, must be defended till the anuus mirabilis of 1789 or 1790. The report of the trees in the forest of Dean, is such as to discover that the growth of oak timber is vally decreased in this country .- This is a matter worth of enquiry.

DUTCH AFFAIRS.

As the present struggle in Holland turns upon the cuthority and privileges annexed to the office of Stadtholder, we lay before our readers the power vested by the constitution in that officer.

The Oath taken by the Stadtholder upon entrance into his employment, is conceived in the following

" I promise and swear to the Confederate States of the Low Countries in defence of the reformed religion; namely, to the High and Low Nobility, and to the Magistrates of the towns of Holland and West Friesland, who represent the States of these nations, to be to them faithful and obedient; and that I will obey, and will so provide, that the officers of the army, the Captains and others, who are fubject to our command, do obey the laws and or-dinances of the Confederate States in Holland, and particularly those of Holland."

The foldiers take a parallel oath to the States, and are to obey the Stadtholder in all that regards war. The Stadtholder, in other respects, has no power to levy or discharge troops, which is exclu-fively invested in the States, who consult the General, but are not obliged to follow his advice. has no power over the payment of the forces. The States likewife referve to themselves the right of appointing Governors of frontier towns; but the other officers are chosen by the Stadtholder, from a dou-ble nomination of the States. But, during a campaign, he fills up the posts that become vacant. He cannot take the field, form a camp, besiege an enemy's country, or undertake any thing of importance, without the confent or express orders of the States General. When he forms any defign which ought not to be made public, he tells the States, that he not to be made public, he tells the states, that he has fomething to undertake which is for the good of the State, without entering into particulars, left the delign, by being discovered, might become impracticable. He describes, in general terms only, the advantages that may be derived from it, and names in grofs the expense that it may be necessary to provide for it : defiring, at the fame time, that two or three perfons may be assigned to him by the Assembly, to whom he can make a more particular discovery. These Deputies being granted, he imparts his intentions, who make a report to the States General, without entering into the particulars of the enterprize; and when the States give their confent, the General prepares to depart, leaving it to them to provide every thing that was requisite for the undertaking. When he takes leave, they assign him three or four Deputies to represent the States, and be his Counfellors in the army. In all other re-fpects he models the Council of War at differetion and has the full management of the military difci-

The Stadtholder's authority, in his civil capacity, is much superior to his military one, and of far greater confequence to the States. He is head of the Courts of Justice, as his name is horne at the head of all orders and sentences. He is also Grand Mailer of the Foreits, Supreme Curator of the University of Leyden: no law can be made there Without his concurrence.

Upon an extraordinary occasion, the Stadtholder appears in the Assembly of the States General, where he has a right to make propositions for the public good. And it is usual to inform him before hand, what subject was to be debated upon, both in this and the Provincial Assembles. He is likewise the Arbitrator of all disputes which arise between the provinces, by virtue of an article in the Union of Utrecht, which lodges that right in the Governors of provinces. He has the power of pardoning eriminals condemned to die; he chufes the Magi firates of cities, upon a double no minarion of their respective Senates, who are contesting that right with him in three provinces of the Confederacy, where they have absolutely rejected his exercise of that right. In Amsterdam, the Senate always appointed its own Regent Burgomafters, the Prince having the power only of nominating the Sheriffs.

This day, the Court of Sellion rose for the autumn vacation. There has been a great deal of bufiness before the Court this Selhon, and we have the pleasure to fay, that such is the assiduity and attention of the Judges, that every question is determined as soon as the forms will admit; so that the complaint of the "law's delay" (as far as depends upon the Court) which was fo frequent feveral years ago, now no longer fublists. There is no instance of fuits hanging up for years, as used to be the case in for-mer times, and which was often more pernicious to the parties, then if the cause had been determined a-

Thursday night, betwixt ten and eleven o'clock, there was a great deal of thunder and lightning in the neighbourhood of Edinburgh.

On Tuesday Mr Howard visited the Orphan Hospital, and expressed much satisfaction at the appearance of that well-conducted charity.

Very few inflances of fuch unbounded philanthropy can be adduced, as that which commands the admiration of the world in Mr Howard. A life and fortun : devoted to the various fcenes of wretchedness with which the goals of Turkey and every country in Europe abound (in hope of allevia-ting the distress of that part of our race to whom are denied almost every bleffing of fociety, and who are forgotten as members of it), prefent a view of hu-man nature perhaps the most exasted it can be placed in. Mr Howard has, as Mr Burke elegantly expreffes it, " made the circumnavigation of charity, not to furvey the fumptuousness of palaces, or the stateliness of temples; not to make accurate meafurements of the remains of ancient grandeur; not to form a scale of the curiofity of modern art; not to collect medals, or collate manuscripts; -but to dive into the depths of dungeons; to plunge into the infection of hospitals; to survey the maniions of forrow and of pain; to take the gauge and dimen-sions of misery, depression, and contempt; to remember the forgotten; to attend to the neglected; to vilit the forfaken; and to compare and collate the distresses of all men in all countries!"—The only similar instance of philanthropy that occurs to us, is that of Bartholomew de la Casas, Bishop of Chiapa, who to be witness of the cruelties exercised by his countrymen upon the natives, made feveral voyages to South America, with the noble purpose of representing the facts to his court, and thereby preventing a repetition of them. He left behind him a narrative of their conduct, which at once thamps his own character with every thing that is valuable, and holds up the conduct of the Spaniards (notwithstanding the feeble attempts that have been made to palliate their cruelties) as a dreadful example of wickedness to posterity which no eloquence can foften! - This intrepid man (fays Abbe Raynal) fummoned his nation to the tribunal of the whole universe, and made the two hemispheres shudder with horror. O! La Casa! thou wert greater by thy humanity, than all the countrymen were by their conquests! Thy name will remain engraved upon every feeling heart, and when the countrymen shall blush at the barbarity of their pretended heroes, they will take pride in thy virtues : They will put this inscription on thy monument, In an age of barbarity,

Letters are received from the Thompson, Bell, of Whitehaven, dated at Greenland the 2d ult. at which time she had got one fish, of eleven and a half bone. She made the ice the 16th of April, and on the 5th of May took on board the crew of the Berry, Snarp, or London. They had an account of 16 English, and two Dutch ships being loft; amongst the former was the Holcomb of Liverpool, part of whose crew was then on board the Bedford of Lynn. At the time of writing, there was a veffel in company with the Thompson, which had spoken the President, of Whitehaven, the fore

The following is a proof how cautious people in trade should be in giving credit to strangers. A few weeks ago a foreigner, stiling himself a merchant in Oilend, who came passenger in a vessel from Petersburgh to Dundee, introduced himself to a merchant in the last-mentioned place; faid he had a house in Petersburgh, and as he should have occasion for money in this country, he gave the gentleman a bill at a month on a house in London for 500 l. for which he took a receipt. Upon fending the bill to London, it was found that no fuch house as that mentioned in the bill existed. Luckily the gentleman had advanced no money, though importuned to do fo. He faid that he had two cargoes of hemp, flax &c configned to a merchant in Leith, and carried about with him a large book with the names of all the towns in Britain alphabetically arranged, together with the names of the first houses in the several

We mentioned formerly, that Lieutenant-Colonel Balneavis had led off great part of the regiment of Sruart to join the Stadtholder. This brave regiment was of the Scots brigade in the Dutch service, a corps well known to the French and Spaniards for two centuries, for their skill and courage. At the close of the late war, the Dutch patriots having formed an alliance with the French, who they were made to believe were better supporters of liberty and the Protestant Religion than Britons, infifted that the Dutch brigade should, contrary to their oath, give up all allegiance to the King of Great Britain, and renounce their colours, under which they had fo triumphantly fought the battles of Holland, and often fo gloriously bled in defence of the Republic. Upon this many of the officers quitted the fervice, and the Parliament of Great Britain allowed them half pay. Others remained, and have now joined the Prince Stadtholder in defence of the true constitution of the country, against the arta and encroachments of the French faction. Extract of a letter from Amsterdam, to a gentle-man in Edinburgh, dated July 3.

'The tender poots Are featter'd wide, and fearful, fitting close, Become the spaniel's, or his master's prey : Thefe follow out, nor let thy eager hafte Engage thee in the fearch of covey fresh : Unus'd and fluidd'ring at the noify gun, Close clapp'd they be, and, reeling in their flight, Are quick brought down; or if, by perverse fate, Thy thot, wide-ersing, wanders from the mark, Not far they fly, but flumble, terrified, Among the waving heath, and, gafping, wait The flot that dooms them to their horrid death. Not fo the rev'rend cock; his wary wiles By frequent danger, thuns the spaniel's fet. Not to his pinions he for fafety trults, But running various thro' the winding mofs, Down with the wind, makes oft his 'fcape on foet : The cautious dog, unconfcious of the trick, Stands pointed dead, and waits thy coming up. Arriv'd at length, he suftes headlong forth, And, madd'ning with fuspense, he thunders round The haunt deserted; calmer as he grows, He tries the various outlets, and now found The dabbled track, he roads the running cock. Close follow at his heels, and eager watch His various turns ; his frequent stops proclaim The prey at hand : nor headlong let him go, But check his keenness, else the wary cock, He quick o'er-runs, who, crafty, lets thee pass, And flies in filence from thy heedless back. Or if too flow his track the dog purities, Thro' all the rugged mofs, his wheeling courfe; He, flooping Bends; and now, the border gain'd, On diffant billoe, galling to thy fight, He, clocking, fits, from whence his hafty flight O'ertops the fummit of the neighb'ring hill.

But when the blazing fun meridian fhines, And wearled Nature droops beneath the heat Scorehing, from heath reflected, to the burn, Deep and mofs-tindur'd, bend thy weary way ; There, or the game waits thy incessant toil; Or, wifer far, the sportsman's simple fare, The bread, the cheefe, the sparkling brandy flask, Regale thy palate, and the wond'ring clown's Unufed he to fee his fellow-men Come from afar, admires thy gaudy garb, And looks and wonders, and looks o'er again, Till bolder grown, he ventures now to alk Of towns, of politics, of kings, and war; Eager he liftens to the mary lons tale In filent wonder, and with forrow hears The crimes, the follies, and the pride of men; The fauff, the quid, by thee at nought efteem'd, The fip of brandy from the leath'ren cup, Unus'd to him, give pleasure in extreme. To the Printer of the Caledonian Mercury,
S I R,
Edinburgh, Aug. 7, 1787.
BRITAIN may jultly boath, that in the 18th
contury the has completed great canals, or inland navigations, and that her tumpike roads traverse the island in most directions. These are the works of a great and enlightened people, and are highly conducive to national profperity. Inveterate abuses, that are attended with profit to many, create in many an interest to have those abuses continued. This surely is at least one reason, why Custom-house sees, bonds, and cocquets, have been so long continued upon our coating trade, contrary to common sense, and the commercial system now so generally studied in Europe. Were the Durch to load the passage of their canals and great rivers with heavy and unnecessary exactions, we might justly call them a very dull and stupid people. In Scorland, this bygone spring, if a sew bolls of seed oats, carried coastways from one part of the frith of Forth to another, were loaded with exactions to the amount of 14.5.; and till very lately, a bark of coals, however small, sailing coastways in the frith, paid of exactions, under different heads, to the amount of 16.5. each trip. This last flagrant piece of injustice is now mostly done away, and indeed ought not to exist at all. The above abuses are now under the consideration of a great affociation of noblemen, gentlemen, &c. in Scotland; Chambers of Commerce have the matter under examination; and most probably they will soon fall under review of Parliament have the matter under examination; and most pro-have the matter under examination; and most pro-bably they will foon fall under review of Parliament. I offer the following observations on the subject: 1 mo. Custom-house fees ought to be totally abo-lished; and in their place, the officers ought to get an advance of salary adequate to trust and trouble. 2 do. The interference of Custom-house officers refrecting good exercised exclusives.

respecting goods carried coastways, is admitted to be advance of latary adequate to trust and trouble.

2do. The interference of Custom-house officers respecting goods carried coastways, is admixted to be necessary in order to secure revenue, to secure positive laws, and to establish facts of information for the use of the public at large; all of which may be obtained although sees are abolished.

3tio. When corn, wood, or coal, is carried coastways, a bond is admixted to be necessary; but why expence to the merchant? A printed bond, upon common paper, will answer the purpose to all intents as effectually as a bond upon vellum or parchment, with 50 stamps of a side, and literally speaking, need not cost a halfpenny a piece—the same rule ought to mke place at cancelling the bond. Bonds, sees, and cocquets, would be a pretty piece of business indeed, at our turnpike gates! They are equally absurd upon our coasting trade, when revenue and poslice laws can be fully maintained without putting the merchant to a penny of expence.

The above proposed regulations relate to the island at large, and evidently would be highly advantageous to the very extensive coasting trade of Britain; but whether obtained now, or at a later period, Scotland, in the mean time, is called upon by honour and interest to say to Britain, "By the treaty of Union we were made equal and one." Our Custom-house fees were to be the same—"the navigation of friths was to be conducted unite not only higher upon the same articles in Scotland upon articles that pay none in England, but heavy fees are exacted in Scotland upon articles that pay none in England. Farther, the navigation of English frith is perfectly frees; whereas in Scotland it is loaded with heavy exactions, under the names of sees, and this gross injustice, this breach of faith and barry gain. One of two things must happen, viz. Britain must observe the terms of the Union, or gain. One of two things must happen, viz. Britain must observe the terms of the Union, or Scotland must break it.—There can be no medium."
